Obesity Among Children Aged 6 to 12 Years. Causes and Risk Factors Patrick Kimuyu, 2017-11-21 Essay from the year 2016 in the subject Health Public Health grade 1 Egerton University language English abstract Obesity among children aged 6 to 12 years has become an enormous challenge to the global healthcare systems. Currently, the prevalence rate of obesity has reached the highest range in the past two decades and this is attributable to the low well-being and overall health among children, which is estimated to have decreased by 37% compared to the case in the 1970s. Childhood obesity is distributed to all parts of the world, even though western countries have long been associated with high prevalence, but such trends seem to have changed. Currently, developing countries account for about 35 million obese and overweight children of the total 43 million globally. Obesity among children poses a risk to the future adult generation, thus it requires appropriate intervention to reduce its burden. It is believed that socio-economic factors are to blame for the high prevalence of childhood obesity. For instance, economic and educational statuses of households influence the lifestyle of family members, especially with regard to dietary habits. Therefore, introducing health measures to promote health education among children and the young people in educational systems will help to reduce its prevalence in the future, thus reducing its burden. New Directions in Behavioral Intervention Development for Pediatric Obesity, An Issue of Pediatric Clinics of North America Sylvie Naar-King, 2016-07-06 Almost one out of every three US children is overweight or obese, with minority youth at the highest risk. There are limited efficacious pediatric obesity interventions available for clinicians, and successful weight loss trials for minority youth are rare. Even fewer interventions have been shown to significantly improve clinical health outcomes such as adiposity, blood pressure, and cholesterol level, and maintenance of behavior change over the long term remains a challenge. Translation I research, in which bench findings are applied to the bedside, is uncommon in the behavioral arena. Thus, advances in our understanding of fundamental human processes such as motivation, emotion, cognition, self-regulation, decision-making, stress, and social networks are not being optimally applied to our most pressing behavioral health problems. This issue of Pediatric Clinics will focus on promising behavioral treatments in the pipeline that have been translated from basic behavioral science and are in the process of refinement and proof of concept testing.

Making a Difference Through Marketing Carolin Plewa, Jodie Conduit, 2016-05-04 This book honors the contribution Professor Pascale Quester has made to academia and higher education through her research, teaching, and leadership. It provides readers with a comprehensive contemporary perspective on marketing practice with an emphasis on the role of marketing in making a difference. Organizations are interwoven with the society in which they operate and are thus commonly expected to shoulder some responsibility in advancing that society. While there has been significant academic and practitioner focus on corporate social responsibility (CSR), research is often limited to the organizational benefits and implementation of CSR initiatives. This book presents a broader perspective. It highlights a variety of players and approaches that are making a difference to their various stakeholder groups, specifically in

An Overview* Patrick Kimuyu, 2017-12-11 Essay from the year 2016 in the subject Medicine Epidemiology grade 1 Egerton University language English abstract This research paper will provide an overview of diabetes in Qatar Diabetes in Qatar has seemingly become an enormous challenge to public healthcare systems Qatar is one of the GCC countries which are known to have the highest diabetes incidence rates In a global ranking Qatar is ranked six whereas the United Arab Emirates and Saudi Arabia who are members of the GCC countries are ranked second and third respectively in regard to incidence rates of diabetes Current epidemiological reports indicate that an estimated 16 percent of the adult population in Qatar is suffering from diabetes in which type 2 diabetes is the most prevalent compared to type 1 diabetes However other clinical reports indicate that diabetes prevalence among children below the age of five years in Qatar has also assumed upward trends For instance prevalence rate for diabetes among children was reported to be 13.7% in 1997 but this rate has more than doubled to reach 28.2% in 2007 From an epidemiological perspective the burden of diabetes to Qatar's healthcare system seems to be overwhelming Therefore it has become a significant concern in community health nursing because the number of Qatari diabetic patients seeking for medical treatment has increased significantly This situation has been worsened by the rising trends of obesity prevalence rates Currently 45% of the population in Qatar is obese in which 55% of diabetic patients are obese Therefore this correlation in incidence and prevalence rates of the two diseases complicates prevention and health promotion measures in Qatar As a result Qatar's efforts to reduce the prevalence of diabetes have been faced with enormous challenges However the country is optimistic that the Qatar Diabetes Project and Stem Cell Projects will be successful In regard to the risk factors the unprecedented increase of diabetes prevalence is attributable to lifestyle and genetic factors

Clinical studies reveal that most people in Qatar have changed their cultural lifestyle to western related lifestyle and this is believed to have contributed significantly to the current diabetes crisis In general diabetes issue in Qatar needs appropriate epidemiological measures to reduce its burden to the country s healthcare system in which social health determinants and epidemiological indicators will help in addressing the issue
