

Check Your Understanding Answer Key

Chapter 3

Check Your Understanding 3.1

1. The patient is identified by a unique number assigned to each patient that distinguishes the patient and his or her health record from all others. Other identifying information is the patient's date of birth, sex, race, and ethnicity (Hispanic or non-Hispanic.) The patient's residence is identified by the zip code or a code used for foreign residences.
2. A complication is defined as an additional diagnosis that describes a condition arising after the beginning of the hospital observation and treatment. A comorbidity, on the other hand, is a pre-existing condition. They are important to capture because they may modify the course of the patient's illness/medical care required and can increase the patient's length of stay. The presence of either may also influence the MS-DRG assignment and payment.
3. A coder should identify if the procedure was surgical in nature, carries a potential risk, carries an anesthetic risk or requires specialized training to help them code for significant procedures. Nonsignificant procedures are usually not coded.
4. Other diagnoses are designated and defined as all conditions that coexist at the time of admission, that develop subsequently, or that affect the treatment received or the length of stay (LOS). Diagnoses are to exclude that related to an earlier episode that has no bearing on the current hospital stay. Other diagnoses may qualify as major complication or comorbidity (MCC) or other complication or comorbidity (CC).
5. Additional UHDDS medical specific data items collected include: Diagnoses, principal diagnosis, other diagnoses, complication, comorbidity, procedures and dates, principal procedure and significant procedure.

Check Your Understanding 3.2

1. Yes, codes for symptoms, signs, and ill-defined conditions, such as chest pain, can be assigned when a related definitive diagnosis has not been established.
