- 1. What is the difference between a habitat and a niche?
A habitat is the general place where an organism lives and a niche is the range of physical and biological conditions in which a species lives and the way the species obtain what it needs to survive and reproduce.
- 2. How is a niche like a profession?
A niche is similar to a profession as it is your role in the world.
- 3. What is competition? Why can't two organisms compete if they live in different habitats?
A symbiotic relationship between or among living things for resources, such as food, space, shelter, mate, ecological status, etc. According to the competitive exclusion principle, if two species attempt to occupy the same niche, one species will be better at competing for limited resources and will eventually exclude the other.
- 4. What are the two types of competition?
Intraspecific and interspecific. Intraspecific is between members of the same species. Interspecific is between members of different species.
- 5. What is a keystone species?
A keystone species is single species that is not usually abundant in a community yet exerts strong control on the structure of a community.
- 6. What is the difference between a predator and a parasite?
A predator is an organism that preys upon other organism while a parasite is an organism that obtains nourishment and shelter on another organism.
- 7. What is symbiosis?
Symbiosis is the relationship in which two species live close together. The three types of symbiosis are mutualism, parasitism, and commensalism.
- 8. Bacteria living in a cow's stomach help the cow break down the cellulose in grass, gaining nutrients in the process. Is this an example of

Forensic DNA Trace Evidence Interpretation Duncan Taylor, Bas Kokshoorn, 2023-05-30 Forensic DNA Trace Evidence Interpretation Activity Level Propositions and Likelihood Ratios provides all foundational information required for a reader to understand the practice of evaluating forensic biology evidence given activity level propositions and to implement the practice into active casework within a forensic institution The book begins by explaining basic concepts and foundational theory pulling together research and studies that have accumulated in forensic journal literature over the last 20 years The book explains the laws of probability showing how they can be used to derive from first principles the likelihood ratio used throughout the book to express the strength of evidence for any evaluation Concepts such as the hierarchy of propositions the difference between experts working in an investigative or evaluative mode and the practice of case assessment and interpretation are explained to provide the reader with a broad grounding in the topics that are important to understanding evaluation of evidence Activity level evaluations are discussed in relation to biological material transferred from one object to another the ability for biological material to persist on an item for a period of time or through an event the ability to recover the biological material from the object when sampled for forensic testing and the expectations of the prevalence of biological material on objects in our environment These concepts of transfer persistence prevalence and recovery are discussed in detail in addition to the factors that affect each of them The authors go on to explain the evaluation process how to structure case information and formulate propositions This includes how a likelihood ratio formula can be derived to evaluate the forensic findings introducing Bayesian networks and explaining what they represent and how they can be used in evaluations and showing how evaluation can be tested for robustness Using these tools the authors also demonstrate the ways that the methods used in activity level evaluations are applied to questions about body fluids There are also chapters dedicated to reporting of results and implementation of activity level evaluation in a working forensic laboratory Throughout the book four cases are used as examples to demonstrate how to relate the theory to practice and detail how laboratories can integrate and implement activity level evaluation into their active casework
