

SOME IMPROVISED MINES

There are all things you can easily make provisions as the materials are not in fact.

The first step is to make a "barrier". This can be made by filling a small can with Gelignite and is attached to a small hole of Cardboard on the end of a 2 1/2" length. Bring the wire and run through the hole.

The next step is to make the "trigger" part of the mine. The trigger itself is made of small pieces of wood such as pine and balsa-wood, etc. If you can't get these use small, strong stones. Push these into a trigger on around the barrier. The more trigger the better—but remember you will have to carry the thing along.

Another idea is to have the barrier in a small bag of wire.

Another very good method is to use an old wooden cork splinter block and Gelignite. This has to be very well.

Yet another is to put several feet sticks of Gelignite together by passing a length of Cardboard through the center of each and leaving a space of 1/2 in. or so between them. Then put the string of triggers over a length of wire and run your.

With a little imagination dozens of other ideas will present themselves, and they will probably be better suited to your part of the country. The essential point is that the number of things you can use in setting the apparatus are in fact.
