William S. Hanson, Ioana A. Oltean,2012-11-12 Historical archives of vertical photographs and satellite images acquired for other purposes mainly declassified military reconnaissance offer considerable potential for archaeological and historical landscape research They provide a unique insight into the character of the landscape as it was over half a century ago before the destructive impact of later 20th century development and intensive land use They provide a high quality photographic record not merely of the landscape at that time but offer the prospect of the better survival of remains reflecting its earlier history whether manifest as earthworks cropmarks or soilmarks These various sources of imagery also provide an opportunity to examine from the air areas of Europe and beyond whose skies are still not open to traditional archaeological aerial reconnaissance Tens of millions of such images are held in archives around the world but their research potential goes very largely untapped A primary aim of this volume is to draw to wider attention the existence scope and potential access to historical archival aerial and satellite photographs in order to encourage their use in a range of archaeological and landscape research By drawing attention to this massive archival resource providing examples of its successful application to archaeological landscape questions and offering advice how to access and utilise the resource the volume seeks to bring this material to wider attention demonstrate its huge potential for archaeology encourage its further use and stimulate a new approach to archaeological survey and the study of landscape evolution internationally A History of Aerial Photography and Archaeology Martyn Barber,2011 Packed with examples of the photography it describes this accessible book celebrates the role which flight and aerial photography have played in the development of archaeology and the identification and analysis of key sites in Britain Beginning with balloonist adventurers and pioneers of flight it explores the parallel development of military reconnaissance techniques and their usefulness to archaeologists concentrating especially on the era between the two world wars when aerial archaeology really came of age British Archives J. History Society Scottish History Society, 1892      Air Photo Interpretation for Archaeologists David Raoul Wilson, 2000 Both the techniques and the scope of air photography made great advances during the twentieth century As a result a mass of material is available to the archaeologist and the local historian First published in 1982 this was the first comprehensive textbook to explain in detail how to identify archaeological and historical sites from the air Unavailable for more than ten years this new edition will be widely welcomed not least for the addition of a section of colour photographs Accurate interpretation requires an understanding of the whole landscape Archaeological sites are not always easily distinguished from geological features or from those produced by agriculture or by industrial modern military or sporting activities A wide selection of both archaeological and non archaeological material is therefore illustrated in the book s 150 air photographs Close attention is paid to the nature of the physical remains in the ground and to the processes whereby they can appear on air photographs This requires an understanding of these processes from the turning of the soil to the printing of the photograph Throughout the perils of misidentification receive as much consideration as the principles of correct interpretation The types of site covered in the book are those of the British Isles but the techniques are applicable throughout continental Europe and beyond      Landscapes Revealed Amanda Brend, Nick Card, Jane Downes, Mark Edmonds, James Moore, 2020-09-30 Winner Current Archaeology 2023 Book of the Year 2023 This volume brings together several years of work devoted to the wider landscape of the Heart of Neolithic Orkney World Heritage Site It documents the results of a program of geophysical and related survey across an area of c 285 hectares between Skara Brae on the west Orkney coast and Maeshowe by the Loch of Stenness The project has made it possible to talk for the first time about the landscape context of some of the most remarkable and renowned prehistoric monuments in Western Europe The aims are to synthesize the data from different forms of survey and to document the changing character and development of this landscape over time The results are genuinely remarkable are presented in a manner which makes the material of interest and value to a relatively wide readership with an array of images which fully document and interpret the evidence Survey work at a landscape scale tends to deal with palimpsests Here descriptive sections are set within a thematic structure designed to explore the changing use and significance of different areas over time The results shed important new light on the character and extent of known prehistoric sites and ceremonial monuments But they also document the afterlives of these and other places and their relation to the lived landscapes of the historic and more recent past In tracing the changing configuration of the World Heritage Area we can begin appreciate this landscape as an artifact of several millennia of dwelling working land attending to wider worlds and to the past itself      History of the Scottish Nation James Aitken Wylie, 1890      The Great World War, a History Frank Arthur Mumby, 1920      The History and Development of Artificial Incubation Erford Lynn Banner, 1916      Early Sources of Scottish History, A.D. 500 to 1286 Alan Orr Anderson, 1922      The Scottish Historical Review , 1905 A new series of the Scottish antiquary established 1886      Elements of Physics
