Paul, Max D. Cooper, Ellen V. Rothenberg, 2012-12-06 Recent advances in the understanding of the major events that shape the immune recognition system have been remarkable The analysis of immunoglobulin Ig gene organization and Ig repertoire diversification in lower vertebrates has provided new insight into this process in mammals Similarly the understanding of the early development of lymphocytes and of the acquisition of immunological tolerance has been aided by elegant studies in quail chicken chimeras using the power of the distinctive markers of the constitutive cells of these birds Great strides have been made in understanding the role played by major histocompatibility complex MHC molecules in antigen presentation and in repertoire selection within the thymus The use of transgenic mice expressing specific T cell receptor TCR genes has elucidated the process of both positive and negative selection In parallel there has been considerable progress in our understanding of tolerance based in part on the use of markers for the V_H genes of T cell receptors and in part on the analysis of the behavior of long term T cell lines This has led to the realization that both clonal deletion and clonal anergy may play critical roles in the maintenance of unresponsiveness to self antigen Molecular analysis of the requirements for expression of membrane immunoglobulin molecules has revealed the existence of a complex that appears to be of critical importance in mediating signalling through Ig receptors In addition major insights have been obtained into the regulation of expression of genes of immunologic interest Journal of the National Cancer Institute ,1996
