Did you know?

Many hearing aid batteries use zinc-air technology and are activated by exposure to oxygen. Don't remove the sticker until you are ready to use the battery.

Once activated, the batteries are continuously running. However, you can conserve battery life by opening your hearing aid battery doors when you remove your hearing aids at night.

Allow the battery one minute to rest after removing the sticker and before placing it into the hearing aid. This will allow it to activate.

Many hearing aid centers allow you to drop off used hearing aid batteries for recycling and to keep them out of the waste stream.

Life expectancy for hearing aid batteries varies, depending on the individual's hearing loss, the amount of time the devices are worn, the ambient conditions of the environment and the age of the batteries themselves.

Color is key! All manufacturers are required to use specific colors for each hearing aid battery size. When you buy batteries, you only need to look for your color -- yellow, brown, orange or blue.
