Breathing Space Tim Altenhof,2026-03-24 An illuminating account of how new knowledge about human respiration impacted architectural design in the early twentieth century Breathing Space is a compelling and wide ranging analysis of pneumatic phenomena in modern culture Architect and historian Tim Altenhof brilliantly explores the physiology of breathing and its reciprocal relationship to bodies and buildings both of which share a common atmosphere Because breathing is controlled by the autonomic nervous system and cannot be willfully overridden it takes place unconsciously and involuntarily most of the time However beginning in the mid nineteenth century attitudes toward breathing changed significantly Breathing became a widely investigated cultural and physiological phenomenon and was the basis for techniques and bodily practices that heightened pulmonary awareness New understandings of air pollution and disease stimulated a widespread preoccupation with ventilation impacting architecture in countless ways Altenhof s close readings of built structures show how the science of breathing was incorporated into architecture whether in the design of factories residences or medical facilities The lungs form a major part of the respiratory system and like no other organ tie the living body directly to its surroundings Yet the role of lungs also poses a topological problem engaging in atmospheric transfer they dissolve the division between inside and outside and despite being an internal organ they sustain a permanent and living connection to the external world This ambiguity and permeability constitute the spatial dimension of breathing Architecture Beyond the Cupola Alberto Pugnale, Alberto Bologna, 2023-05-24 This book reviews Dante Bini s inventions and designs focusing on his form resistant Binishell and other pneumatic construction systems Dante Bini s double profile of architect and builder underpins the narrative of the entire book It is used to analyse the evolution of the early reinforced concrete Binishell patent into a variety of automated construction systems based on the use of air Dante Bini has always been quite proactive in promoting his work and disseminating the results of his experimentations and achievements via journal articles conference presentations and public talks promotional brochures in multiple languages were also prepared to export and license his patents in various countries from Italy to the Americas and Australia Despite this a rigorous study of Dante Bini s work is still unavailable and the relevance of this figure to contemporary architecture has yet to be discussed comprehensively This book fills in this gap and arrives at the right time during the last two decades there has been an exponential interest in shell and spatial structures particularly concerning the use of complex geometries and innovative construction techniques This book will be of interest to academics in architectural design theory and construction history and practitioners and students interested in expanding their knowledge in the design and construction of shell and spatial structures
