Access to Information Is Key to Success

In an increasingly competitive business environment, the availability of information is often the differentiator between success and failure. The proliferation of the Internet and the movement towards on-demand computing has only heightened the need to effectively leverage information assets to increase revenue and profit opportunities. And at the heart of an organization's information assets are its data resources.

With all the potential disasters in today's world — fire, flood, theft, hardware failure, human error, virus attacks and so forth — every organization needs to protect its data and ensure its continued availability.

As businesses grow, so do their storage requirements, and data protection environments can become extremely complex. As a result, businesses demand exceptional flexibility from software tools.

To meet the rising need to manage data growth and provide around-the-clock availability, many organizations are deploying the latest storage technologies, including Storage Area Networks (SANs), Network-Attached Storage (NAS) and Disk Array technologies.

The ideal data protection solution must address the business demands for high performance and availability, scale with the environment and leverage new storage paradigms such as Disk Arrays, SAN, NAS, Snapshot technologies and cross-platform management across the entire enterprise, including multiple operating systems and applications.
