

GUIDELINES FOR POSTPARTUM CARE

The postpartum period begins from the baby's birth and lasts up to six to eight weeks when the mother's body almost reaches the pre-pregnancy state. However, the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology (ACOG) now recommends 12 weeks (three months) of care and support for the mother post-delivery.

In March 2022, the WHO launched its first-ever global guidelines for postnatal care of women and newborns in the first six weeks after birth. Here are the highlights:

- High-quality care in health facilities for women and babies for a minimum of 24 hours after birth and three additional postnatal check-ups in the first six weeks.
- Identification of and response to danger signs in mother and baby that need urgent medical attention.
- Treatment and support for common problems after childbirth including vaginal pain and breast engorgement in new mothers.
- Counselling to promote exclusive breastfeeding, advice on contraception and physical activity.
- Support to help families interact and respond to babies' signals; encourage partner involvement in taking care of the newborn.
- Screening for postnatal depression and anxiety in mothers and providing services for the same.
