

Overheating

Cooling system components like coolant level, fans, thermostat and water pump can fail, causing overheating. Common causes include low coolant, clogged radiator, broken thermostat, water pump failure, broken fans, etc.

Cooling Fans

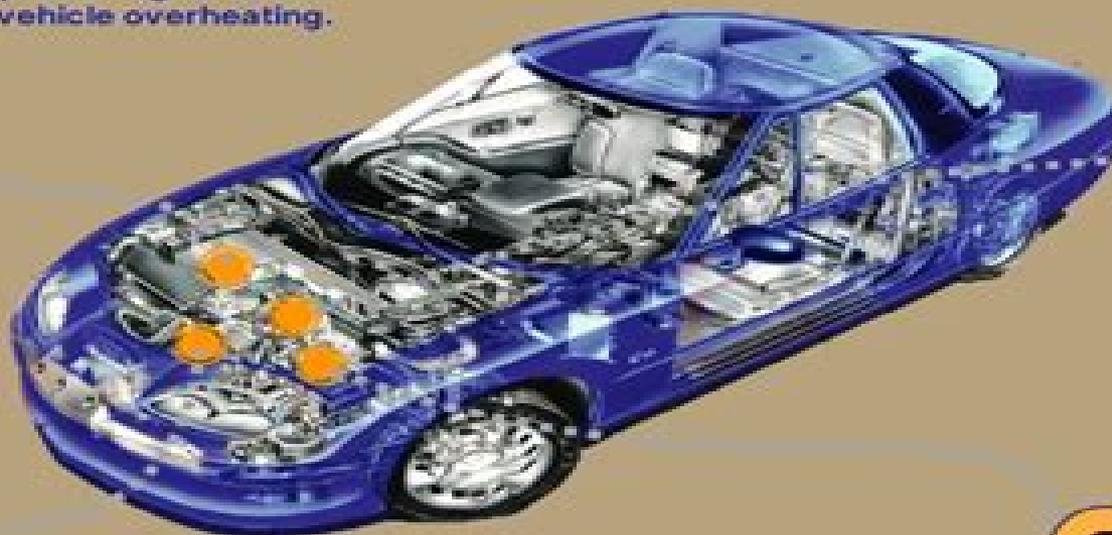

Cooling fans are vital to improve engine airflow. When faulty, they'll cause vehicle overheating.

1

Thermostat

The thermostat ensures the engine operates at the right temperature and keeps it in that temperature range. When the thermostat fails, it'll affect fuel efficiency and cause engine wear.

2

4

3

Coolant Level

The coolant carries engine heat away in the vehicle's cooling system. When the coolant level is low, the engine overheats.

Water Pump

The water pump is vital to ensure enough flow to keep coolant circulating in the engine. So, if it fails, it'll allow overheating.
