

The American Pageant Chapter 38 Topic Outline

The Stormy Sixties: 1960 - 1968

1. Introduction and Context
  - a. Under Kennedy, the nation's youngest president ever, America did not know what to expect after the relative calmness during the Eisenhower administration. Under Kennedy through the "stormy sixties," America would experience revolutions in sexual ideas, civil rights, and gender roles due to the struggles for racial and gender equality. In addition, America would struggle through the Vietnam War and see the rise of unprecedented "youth culture."
2. Kennedy's "New Frontier" Spirit
  - a. As the youngest president, Kennedy was viewed as hopeful and glamorous, and brought one of the youngest cabinets as well. His first initiative after appointing his brother, Robert F. Kennedy, as attorney general was to prioritize international security for the FBI (rather than organized crime and civil rights violations at home), although veteran FBI director J. Edgar Hoover disagreed with this goal.
  - b. Kennedy also addressed a New Frontier when speaking of what was to come within the next decade, and inspired hope within Americans through looking to the future with optimism.
    - i. One of Kennedy's first ideas was to create the Peace Corps, which would consist of volunteers who would help to build up underdeveloped countries; this was a small part of a large goal to inspire Americans to actively contribute to the growth of their country.
    - ii. Kennedy invited poet Robert Frost to recite a poem at his inauguration; this poem emphasized how far America could come, and how much further it could go in the future.
  - c. Kennedy quickly became popular among Americans in light of his prestigious Harvard education, charm, energy, and humor which gave Americans hope for improvement on the horizon.
3. The New Frontier at Home
  - a. Although Kennedy had idealistic goals for his New Frontier, he met resistance within Congress, despite a slight Democratic majority. His plans to boost education and medical assistance for the elderly through federal funds met stiff resistance within Congress as Southern Democrats and Republicans united against the Catholic and Northern Kennedy.
  - b. Kennedy came into office hoping to bring the economy out of the recession it had sunk into under Eisenhower, but was quickly outraged by the deliberate inflationary tactics of big steel businesses, specifically after they had agreed to put a cap on steel prices. He called these businesses to the White House to castigate them, and in response they put an end to steel inflation.
    - i. After this initial hiccup, Kennedy employed his method of boosting the economy and the belief in free enterprise by reducing general taxes and instead extending money to private holders, a particularly Republican approach.
  - c. Kennedy's New Frontier also involved participation in the ongoing space race with Russia; despite warnings that this endeavor would be a waste, Kennedy spoke of rising to standards of human excellence and potential. By July of 1969, the Apollo mission left Earth with the goal of putting the first man on the moon.
4. Rumbings in Europe
  - a. Shortly after taking oath of office, Kennedy met with Soviet leader Khrushchev to discuss agreements over Berlin. However, Khrushchev, prone to bullying American leaders, threatened to create a treaty which would extend Soviet influence into West Germany.
    - i. As an extension of these threats, the USSR began to build the Berlin Wall in 1961, to prevent inhabitants of East Germany from moving into West Germany.
  - b. After initial hostility with Russia, Kennedy refocused on Western Europe, which had grown miraculously with the help of the Marshall Plan and the European Economic Community (EEC), which was to become the European Union. Kennedy further helped this growth through promoting tariff cuts authorized by the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, which would help stimulate more open trade with members of the EEC. Further tariff negotiations were collectively referred to as the "Kennedy Round."
  - c. However, some within America sought an alliance where America was dominant, which also happened to be a fear of Western European leaders, including France's Charles de Gaulle. De Gaulle, sensing that America would attempt to only work with Britain and eventually gain complete dominance over waterways and commercial ties, began to build up a small arsenal of nuclear arms.
5. Foreign Flare-Ups and "Flexible Response"
  - a. Along with European decolonization at this time in Southeast Asia came entangling obligations for America; after Laos had gained freedom from France in 1954, it was catapulted into civil war against a rising Communist power. America, fearing that this Communist wave would combine with Communism in China, felt the need to become involved.
    - i. However, Kennedy, believing that the strategy of mass retaliation was unnecessary and excessive, proposed the idea of "flexible response," accommodating your resources and strategies based on the extremity of the crisis occurring. However, this did increase Kennedy's war spending through the employment of the specialized "green berets."
