

APUSH UNIT 5 REVIEW GUIDE (1844-1877)

For Students Preparing for the AP® United States History Exam

10-17%
of the APUSH exam

The fifth unit of the AP® United States History (APUSH) course focuses on the period from 1844 to 1877, from the election of James K. Polk through the conclusion of the Reconstruction era.

This unit is eligible to be assessed on every portion of the exam (including the DBQ).

MANIFEST DESTINY AND WESTWARD EXPANSION

John Stein's famous painting, American Progress (1876), shows an allegorical personification of the national idealism that accompanied westward expansion.

The Louisiana Purchase opened new lands for Americans to move west and settle across the Mississippi River. Some Americans (mostly from the South) chose to settle in Texas, which was then a part of Mexico. When Texas declared its independence in 1836 and petitioned to join the United States through annexation, President Andrew Jackson was skeptical of taking on a territory that would ignite debates about slavery at home and risk a war with Mexico. However, by the 1840s, many Americans were convinced that it was the Manifest Destiny (obvious God-given purpose) of the United States to expand across North America all the way to the Pacific Ocean.

When James K. Polk won the 1844 presidential election on an expansionist platform, the road was cleared for the dream of Manifest Destiny to become a reality. In 1845, Congress annexed Texas through a joint resolution. A year later, the United States declared war on Mexico, ushering in a new era of intense sectional conflict.

THE MEXICAN-AMERICAN WAR

The Mexican-American War began in 1846 after the United States annexed Texas and refused to defend disputed land claims all the way to the Rio Grande. Militarily, the war resulted in a decisive victory for the United States, with US troops occupying Mexico City. The United States forced Mexico to cede its northern territories in return for $15 million.

The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1848) offered few protections to Mexicans and American Indians who lived in the ceded territory. Mexicans who chose to remain in the Mexican Cession were granted US citizenship, but the federal government did not always honor their property claims. The Apache, Navajo, and other Southwestern tribes fought unsuccessfully to hold onto their ancestral lands before being forced onto reservations.

The Mexican Cession of 1848

THE COMPROMISE OF 1850

The Mexican-American War ignited fresh debates about slavery. Free Soilers, who opposed slavery in the West (but not in the South), supported the Wilmot Proviso, which proposed to ban slavery in the entire Mexican Cession. Southern politicians wanted to open the newly-acquired territory to slavery. When settlers in California proposed to enter the Union as a free state, Congress was deadlocked until Henry Clay put together a compromise. Clay's Compromise of 1850 admitted California as a free state in return for passing the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, which made it easier for Southern slaveholders to recover their so-called "property" in Northern free states. The compromise also established popular sovereignty (letting settlers vote to decide the status of slavery) in the Mexican Cession.

THE ROAD TO CIVIL WAR

The 1850s set the stage for the Civil War. After the Democrats won the 1852 election, Congress passed the Kansas-Nebraska Act, which established popular sovereignty in areas that the Missouri Compromise had previously closed to slavery. The Kansas-Nebraska Act led to the formation of the Republican Party, which opposed the further expansion of slavery. Violence erupted both in Kansas and in Congress, with John Brown killing proslavery settlers in Kansas and Preston Brooks caning Charles Sumner in the US Senate. When the Supreme Court's Dred Scott (1857) decision opened all federal territories to slavery, the Republican Party gained momentum in the North, resulting in the election of Abraham Lincoln as president in 1860. After Lincoln was elected, South Carolina and other states in the Deep South seceded from the Union and formed the Confederate States of America.

This political cartoon depicts the caning of Charles Sumner from the perspective of Northerners, who saw Preston Brooks's actions as unprovoked.
