CODOMINANCE – BLOOD TYPES

In humans, blood antigens can create four different phenotypes. The alleles are A, B, and O, and the phenotypes are A, B, AB, and O. The letters correspond to the carbohydrates found on the surface of a red blood cell. Since one blood type allele is inherited from each parent, there are several possible combinations that can be inherited.

Phenotype	Genotype
A	AA or AO
B	BB or BO
AB	AB
O	OO

Both A and B alleles are dominant, meaning that they determine an organism's phenotype. Because they are dominant, if one A allele and one B allele are inherited, then the blood type and genotype would be AB. This is an example of codominance, in which both alleles are expressed in the phenotype. However, the O allele is recessive, meaning that it does not affect an organism's phenotype unless there are two O alleles. If a B allele is inherited, it can also come up as the dominant for a blood type O allele, resulting in phenotype B.

INCOMPLETE DOMINANCE

In non-Mendelian genetics, some alleles are neither dominant nor recessive over the other allele. Cases in which one allele is not completely dominant over another is called incomplete dominance. In incomplete dominance, the heterozygous genotype has a color somewhere between the two homozygous phenotypes. Two alleles produce an intermediate phenotype, rather than one fully determining the phenotype.

Snapdragons are a type of flower that exhibit incomplete dominance. The alleles for red (R) and white (r) flowers show incomplete dominance. Heterozygous (Rr) plants have pink flowers – an intermediate mix of red and white coloring. Complete the following Punnett squares and write the probabilities of the phenotypes as percentages.

1. Cross a pink flower with a white flower. What is the probability the following phenotypes?

	R	r
r	Rr	rr
r	Rr	rr

2. Cross two pink flowers. What is the probability the following phenotypes?

4. Cross two flowers with blood. What is the greatest following probability?
