between morphological plant features As such the Research Topic bundles examples of new mathematical techniques including persistent homology graph theory and shape statistics to tackle questions in crop breeding developmental biology and vegetation modeling The challenge to model plant morphology under field conditions is a central theme of the included papers to address the problems of climate change and food security that require the integration of plant biology and mathematics from geometry and topology research applied to imaging and simulation techniques The introductory white paper written by the workshop participants identifies future directions in research education and policy making to integrate biological and mathematical approaches and to strengthen research at the interface of both disciplines Advances in Materials Science Jian Xin Zou,2015-02-10 Selected peer reviewed papers from the International Conference on Advances in Materials ICAM 2014 December 13 14 2014 Shanghai China
