Important OSHA Standards Contributing to Fewer Workplace Accidents

Standard 1910.132: Personal Protective Equipment: Protective equipment, including clothing, helmets, goggles and other eye protection, must be used when process or environment presents hazards. Electrical safety equipment or mechanical failures can cause deadly harm.

Standard 1910.147: Lock Out-Tag Out: Before any servicing or maintenance on a piece of machinery, the energy source must be isolated and the stored energy released. This standard is one of the "Big Six" OSHA standards that have saved the most lives.

Standard 1910.119: Process Safety Management (PSM): Put in place in 1992 to prevent a major unplanned release of a highly hazardous chemical, PSM has saved lives and prevented billions of dollars in damage. PSM requires employers to identify and control hazards that involve 10,000 pounds or more of a highly hazardous chemical.

OSHA Inspections: OSHA inspectors conduct workplace safety and health inspections to ensure that employers are complying with OSHA standards. Inspections are conducted by OSHA inspectors, state OSHA inspectors, or authorized representatives of OSHA. Inspections are conducted to ensure that employers are complying with OSHA standards.

Division of Technical Services,1975 Training Requirements in OSHA Standards and Training Guidelines U.S. Department of Labor,Occupational Safety Administration,2014-03-18 Many standards promulgated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration OSHA explicitly require the employer to train employees in the safety and health aspects of their jobs Other OSHA standards make it the employer's responsibility to limit certain job assignments to employees who are certified competent or qualified meaning that they have had special previous training in or out of the workplace The term designated personnel means selected or assigned by the employer or the employer's representative as being qualified to perform specific duties These requirements reflect OSHA's belief that training is an essential part of every employer's safety and health program for protecting workers from injuries and illnesses Many researchers conclude that those who are new on the job have a higher rate of accidents and injuries than more experienced workers If ignorance of specific job hazards and of proper work practices is even partly to blame for this higher injury rate then training will help to provide a solution As an example of the trend in OSHA safety and health training requirements the Process Safety Management of Highly Hazardous Chemicals standard Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Part 1910.119 contains several training requirements This standard was promulgated under the requirements of the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 The Process Safety Management Standard requires the employer to evaluate or verify that employees comprehend the training given to them This means that the training to be given must have established goals and objectives regarding what is to be accomplished Subsequent to the training an evaluation would be conducted to verify that the employees understood the subjects presented or acquired the desired skills or knowledge If the established goals and objectives of the training program were not achieved as expected the employer than would revise the training program to make it more effective or conduct more frequent refresher training or some combination of these The requirements of the
